

EDITORIAL

WITH this volume Asian Perspectives is back to the earlier practice of two numbers a year. The next issue may well be the last with a news and bibliography section, as the Far-Eastern Prehistory Association is in the process of reorganization and will soon start to put out a newsletter which will contain news and bibliography. This means that the journal will have more space for original articles and book reviews. The combination of new available space and two issues a year should bring us up to date on a considerable backlog of papers which we have had since 1969. Now we are going to need a greater flow of original articles.
